$2000 FOR HOSPITAL.

Good Beginning of County Canvas. List of Subscribers.

The Addison County Hospital Association have been busy in a quiet way and have pledges amounting to over $2000. There are many men throughout the county who have expressed their willingness to join in this worthy cause.

It is the plan of the committee to ask the members representing the various towns throughout the county to begin a personal canvas among their fellow townsmen.

Although the matter has not been definitely settled it is the desire of the committee and hope of the public that the hospital be situated on Chipman Hill in Middlebury.

Persons desiring to see photographs of the plans of the proposed hospital may do so at the office of the Enterprise and Vermonter in Vergennes or at the office of the Middlebury Register in Middlebury.

A list of those who have already made pledges in support of this cause follows:

HILLGAS ADDRESSES COLLEGE.

Excellent Address by New Commissioner. Asks Support of Higher Education.

Dr. Milo B. Hillegas, recently appointed State Commissioner of Education, was in Middlebury Tuesday and addressed the Faculty and students of the college at the close of the morning assembly. He was heard with marked interest, especially when he referred to his views on Vermont education. When he said it was his great ambition to make it possible for every Vermont boy or girl, even those in the mountain towns, to go through high school and college, the students gave him hearty applause. He said he should need the support of all the institutions in the State and that on his part he would pledge his support to all in an impartial manner.

At the close of his address, which was heartily applauded, President Thomas said he hoped if Dr. Hillegas ever found Middlebury College standing for a narrow or selfish policy, he would let him know by return mail. He also said he was glad to hear him speak of "Our State," a privilege Vermonters do not always allow to new-comers.

Dr. Hillegas spoke in part as follows: "I can remember with considerable vividness the impression that men who had been out of college some fifteen or twenty years used to make upon us as students when they came back and tried to talk to us; and how we thought back into the dim past as far as we could and wondered just what conditions surrounded them when they were working as we were working at that time."

"Remembering that, I hesitate somewhat about venturing out upon anything in the way of advice, and yet one feature of the talks that were given to us by men who had been out in the world has come back to me time and time again. I think I never listened to one of those persons without getting a stronger desire to get out into life, as we used to put it."

"I want to take a somewhat different point of view this morning, and to urge upon you as students that you will never be living any more than you are at the present time. If there is in the mind of any young woman or young man before me the notion that they are preparing for life by not living, I beg of you to change your notion. You are living today. This is life. The difficulty arises possibly from what may be taken as more or less of an artificial situation within our colleges and universities. I want to indicate very briefly one or two of the key thoughts in actual living."

"I think I might take as my text the offer that a good Vermonter made some time ago and re-made within the past five days a promise of $10,000 job to just as many people as could qualify for $10,000 positions. Now I wonder just what that man has in mind as being necessary in qualifying for such a large position. I will venture to say that the first thing that he wants is a conception on the part of the candidate of relative values. He does not want a person who sees little things in big ways and neglect the big things of life. And again I come back to the notion that right here in your life, at the present time, you have one of the best opportunities for judging of relative values."

"If I had to go through my college course again, and I say this after having had to deal with college students for a number of years, and graduate students at that, I would not take so seriously what my instructors had to say. I mean that in all sincerity. I would have some judgment of my own in regard to what we were talking about. If it were History, Economics, or Mathematics, or any of these subjects, I would form some conclusions of my own. Now as I understand it, that is one of the things that you people can do right here in your life at the present time."

"I would know something about the big problems that were concerning mankind. When we were studying the history of Greece, I would realize that today the attention of the world is attracted to certain problems concerned with Greece at the present time."

"In the second place, I would gather information with which to answer to my satisfaction these problems. I would not be a Democrat because my father was a Democrat, or a Republican because my father was a Republican. I would have all sorts of patriotism and kindly feeling for my own institution, but I would never put my own institution so high above every other that I could not see where their points of advantage might be. I would get all of the data required for the solution of a problem and then I would organize my information so that when I went out I would have a solution of my own."

the present time. I have been asked on various occasions what my policy is, or will be. I think I can give it in very short terms.

"Some three years ago it was my privilege to travel about a large portion of the State. I may have met some of you in your schools at that particular time. I found boys and girls of college quality in what you people here are pleased to term mountain towns."

"The big ambition that I have is to make a very clear path for the boy and girl, no matter where they may be, right down through the elementary school, and high school, and through college. I am fully aware that no other State has ever accomplished that, and if we accomplish it in our State it is going to take the co-operation of everybody concerned with college, and with education in general. Young people, I crave your backing for this enterprise."

"Now this had not ought to be a one-sided affair. I ought not to come before this group this morning and ask for backing without at once telling you that higher education and the interests of your own institution will be very prominent in my mind. I think I have been associated too long with colleges and universities not to look at their problems as almost personal, and while I ask your sincerest backing in all of these matters pertaining to educational matters of the country, I pledge you in return my sincerest backing for the interests of your own institution."
